HENRY S. GILBERT

Henry S. Gilbert was a native of the Keystone state, (Pennsylvania) having been born in Berks County on December 31, 1833, the son of Henry and Lydia (Spang) Gilbert, both of whom were born in Pennsylvania, where the father operated a gristmill and a woolen factory. The great-grandfather, Mr. Gilbert, emigrated from England to America in 1750, and his son, grandfather of Henry S., born in Pennsylvania, was a soldier in the war of the Revolution. Mr. Spang, the maternal grandfather of Mr. Gilbert, belonged to a prominent family of Berks county and his father was a soldier of the Revolution, in which it was his good fortune to save the life of Gen. Nippenburg, whom he accompanied to Germany after the declaration of peace. Henry S. Gilbert supplemented the discipline he received in private schools in the academy at Boyertown, Pa., and engaged in teaching for a time and then learned the saddler's trade. He purchased the business of his employer and continued it for two years, when, in 1854, he removed to Lafayette, Ind., and worked at his trade in that state for six months, and then he continued westward to Lawrence, Kan., where he engaged in contracting and building, taking contracts from the New England Aid Society. He also took up government land near Manhattan, Kan., with the intention of engaging in agriculture, but in 1855 removed to Missouri, where he followed his trade until September, when he started for the Rocky mountains.

Upon reaching Fort Laramie, Wyo., he engaged in trading with the Crow and Sioux Indians, and also furnished supplies to emigrants. In the spring of 1858 he was sent to overtake Gen. Johnson's command, then pushing forward against the Mormons, and to supply the soldiers with rations. Mr. Gilbert found it inexpedient to do this, and stopped at South pass, where he established a trading post and general store and for two years traded with the Snake Indians. Their chief, Washakie, who was half Flathead and half Snake, was a great friend of Mr. Gilbert and gave him many tokens of his esteem. In 1859 Mr. Gilbert sold his store and established a trading post at the foot of the Rocky Ridge, in Wyoming, where he built the first wooden house erected there. He traded with the Indians on Wind River until the fall of 1860, when he removed to Fort Bridger, and soon after established a store for Indian trade at Millersville. On November 20, 1860, Mr. Gilbert was married at Millersville, Utah, to Miss Margaret McMinn, of Salt Lake City. She was born in Nova Scotia, whence she accompanied her parents to Utah. After his marriage Mr. Gilbert located on a ranch south of Fort Bridger, and soon after he completed a dwelling on the place. In the spring of 1862 there was an uprising of the Ute Indians, and, as they stole the horses and stock of the settlers and menaced their safety, Mr. Gilbert was compelled to abandon the ranch and return with his wife and their child to Fort Bridger. There he entered the employ of the government, putting in a bridge at Ham's Fork, and later became associated with Judge Carter in a contract to furnish hay for the military posts, and to supply beef to the troops, and he was thus engaged until the spring of 1863. On August 12th he started for Virginia City, Montana where he arrived on September 1, 1863, and engaged in mining.

Mr. Gilbert purchased two placer claims in Alder Gulch, but these proved unprofitable. Looking to start a successful business he went into partnership with Thomas Smith for half interest in creating the Virginia City Brewery the first such business in the State. Having no knowledge of how to craft beer they hired a German brewer and cooper, Christian Richter. He was the key to their success, selling around 50 barrels of beer each month. In March 1866 Thomas Smith sold his half to Christian Richter for $14,000. It is said "Henry and partner kept the equipment of the plant to the highest standard, made improvements and additions as demanded, and brews a superior product - the finest in the world - which finds a ready local sale and also commands a large trade in the territory around Virginia City." They operated the business under the name Gilbert and Richter until 1872 when Gilbert bought out his partner and changed the name to the H.S. Gilbert Brewery. Following the death of Henry S. Gilbert in November 1902, the brewery was operated for two years by J.H. Powell in the interests of Gilbert's Estate. On the settling of the Estate in 1904, Valentine Gilbert, son of Henry Gilbert, changed the name to the Gilbert Brewing Company and conducted the business until prohibition closed all breweries. Following prohibition, a corporate charter was filed re-establishing the Gilbert Brewing Company on December 11, 1934. The charter expired in 1974.

In 1880 Henry was elected county treasurer and held that responsible office for eleven years. He was assessor of Madison County in 1871, mayor of Virginia City for two terms and an alderman for six terms. Fraternally he is identified with Virginia City Lodge No. 1, A. F. & A. M., of which he is past master. To Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert fifteen children have been born, 11 girls and 4 boys.

Henry Gilbert, at the time was one of the oldest citizens from this section of the country and a pioneer of Montana, was killed in a runaway accident. His horses became frightened and Gilbert was thrown from his wagon, striking on a rock by the roadside. Henry Gilbert was 69 years of age.

Brewery Today

The Gilbert Brewery now hosts the Brewery Follies which is a contemporary American-burlesque-cabaret musical and skit show.
