INTERVIEW WITH THOMAS J. BIRD IN 1942

Thomas J. Bird and wife Matilda Bird 1911

The following is the continuation of an interview between Eleanor Luxton and Thomas J. Bird who lived in the Twin Bridges community.

I will now back-trail and tell what I know about what led up to the necktie parties. Shortly after he moved near the Big Hole river and Wisconsin creek, Henry Edgar, one of the discoverers of Alder creek went to Oregon and bought beef cattle, about 100 head, and brought them to Pennington's ranch for my stepfather to care for. About two miles and half above our place was a horse ranch owned by John Franks or 'Long John' who turned state's evidence in the Nicholas Tybalt case. Pennington always carried a muzzle-loading rifle to hunt deer, while looking after the cattle. In the Fall of 1863 he was near the Long John ranch and shot a deer. It was wounded and ran off, so he went over to Long John's to get a dog to track the deer. Before he got there a dog came out barking and George Hildreth, Long John's partner, came out of a tent, an Indian wycupp.

Pennington heard someone ask who was there and George replied that it was Pennington. Pa asked for the man to come out of the tent. This is when Pa was introduced to George Ives. He was about 6 feet tall, "broad-shouldered, well made light complexioned and wore a blue cavalry overcoat trimmed with a beaver fur cape on the cuffs and collar. They then used the dog to find the wounded deer. Meanwhile, Nicholas Tybalt was sent out by a man named Clark from Summit to this Long John ranch to get a span of mules and he failed to return. It was rumored that Tybalt had left the country with the mules, but Clark knew Tybalt to be honest and he suspected foul play. A few days later a man by the name of Billy Palmer and a man by the name of Alec, came into the valley on a hunt from Nevada City. Not far from the Long John ranch they shot a prairie chicken, which fell dead not far away and near a little bunch willows. One of the men went to pick up the chicken, and not over ten feet from the chicken was a dead man. They then went to Long John's and found him not at home, but Hildreth, Long John's partner, was there. They told him about the dead man and asked what they should do with the body. Hildreth said "Dead men are nothing; they have them in Virginia City every morning for breakfast." Getting no satisfaction and being acquainted with Pennington, they drove to his ranch and told him what they had found and where. Pennington put two and two together and made four and then told them to go back and get the body and load it onto the wagon and take it to Nevada City and have Clark identify it. If he proved it to be Tybalt to tell Clark to get eight or ten men whom he could trust and come to the Pennington ranch. They did this and the men came and William Palmer was there. On the way down they got off the road until they would come out to what is now the Tash ranch, then owned by a man named Wolf. Wolf and his hired man, Pete Derouf, guided them to the Pennington ranch, which they reached about 12 o'clock at night. Coming over they had come through the ice and swampy ground and were very wet so Pennington built a fire in the large house fireplace. Pennington took Clark outside and told him what he knew. Pennington had been getting out house-logs on the Big Hole and was about ready to come home with his load when two men rode up, leading a span of mules. One was George Ives, whom he already knew; the other was a stranger. Ives was riding a horse, which Pennington knew belonged to the Long John ranch and to arrest John and whoever else might be there, especially George Ives, then take Long John to the place where the dead man had been found and make him tell what he knew about the mules. He was sure John knew about the killing and the horse Ives was riding. They went to the Long John ranch and found the five men there, Ives among them. They arrested the group and took John to the place where the dead man's body had been found. The other men were left in charge. Aleck Carter was also there. While they were gone, some of these men who came with Clark vouched for Carter and some for Ives and some for the others, so that all the arrested men were vouched for. They were about to turn them loose, but some men said "No, we will keep Ives!" Long John made the statement and asked them to protect them from the road agents. He told them that when Tybalt came with a span of mules, Carter and Ives were there in the tent. They saw he had a considerable purse (value) with him, so they went out of the tent to a bunch of brush and hid themselves beside the trail. They pulled straws to see which one would do the killing. Carter drew the fatal straw and when Tybalt came along he was then killed by Carter. When the men returned to the ranch after this confession, Carter and the rest except Ives, had their horses saddled and were gone. Later the Vigilantes trailed them and found them in the Bitter Root country or Hell's Gate, at what is now known as Missoula. In the meantime the Vigilantes had Ives and with him proceeded on their way to Nevada City, where they gave Ives a trial by the miners and found him guilty. While on their way to Nevada City, somewhere between the Cold Spring ranch, or the stage station, Ives, being on a fresh spotted appaloosa mustang, proposed a race to the Pete Daley's, a mile or so farther on, for whiskey. The committee, not thinking of any trick, agreed and the race was on. They soon saw that Ives was gaining fast and showings no sign of slackening his pace, and that his intention was to get away. They kept as close as possible, unfortunately they lagged behind, giving Ives time to change to a fresh horse already saddled and hitched to a rack in front of Pete Daley's place, now called the Robber's Roost. The Vigilantes stopped at Pete Daley's long enough to ask for fresh horses, but they were turned away, so they continued the race on their tired animals. When they arrived near Bevins Gulch they found Ives's horse, but no Ives. Knowing Ives was unarmed they made a close search and soon found him. After some words they were able to bring him back into custody and were on their way to Nevada City. During the trial it was made to appear that Ives was not the actual murderer of Tybalt but that Alec Carter was. That did not matter and so a necktie party ensued and Ives was no longer. There was little after the execution of Ives until the Vigilantes were on the trail of Carter and those who were with him. The Vigilantes met a man called Red and inquired of him if he had seen such a man answering the description of Carter, or the men who were with him. Red said the man had stayed overnight at a ranch this side of Deer Lodge, but when the Vigilantes got to the ranch Carter and his men were gone. They continued their search and overtook them at Hell's Gate, and held more of the necktie parties, hanging six or seven more road agents. They then continued on their way and returned to Nevada City. En-route, at Laurin, they met up with Red Yeager and had another little tie-party consisting of Red and a man called Brown. Just before the hanging, Red asked the Vigilantes who they had hung up to the present time and they named them, Red said that not an innocent man was named. It was but a very short time until the Vigilantes came to about a mile below Pete Daley's on Ramshorn creek and corralled a bunch of Daley's horses for fresh mounts and proceeded on their way to Bannack to have another necktie party when Plummer, Rey and Stinson took the most spectacular parts, with the exception of a man named the Mexican. The Mexican had taken refuge in a log cabin in another part of town, where the Vigilantes went to get him. It was a moonlight night and by knocking chinking out of the wall the Mexican could watch them coming. He fatally shot the leader of the Vigilantes. They concluded it would take strategy to get him to come out of the cabin, so two of them detoured, keeping out of sight, and fired into the cabin from the opposite side. The smoke got so thick and so intense he was forced to come out and was then was shot. So ends some of my memories of the famous Vigilantes and the road agents of the early days in our valley.

Researched by Joetta Wetzsteon The information came primarily from written interviews with pioneers and their descendants, and from articles in Montana and Alberta newspapers.

GET INVOLVED by following the steps:

1. SHOE BOX: Available at Beacon Business, many of our local churches or get great preprinted shoe boxes available on our website.
 2. "WOW" ITEM: Select a quality "wow" toy such as a doll, soccer ball with pump, or stuffed animal to bless a child.
 3. OTHER GIFTS: Pack full with other fun toys, hygiene items, and school supplies. Do not tape your shoe box closed. Use rubber bands instead. The Distribution Centers need to check the contents of the box.
 4. PRAY: Most importantly, pray for the child who will receive your gift. Include a personal note and photo to delight the heart of a child.
 5. DROP OFF LOCATION: During the Collection Week of November 13th to the 20th at Valley Assembly Church, 114 N. Main Street in Sheridan.
- Monday, November 13th - 1:00 - 3:00 pm
Tuesday, November 14th - 1:00 - 3:00 pm
Wednesday, November 15th - 1:00 - 3:00 pm

Friday, November 17th - 5:00 - 7:00 pm
Saturday, November 18th - 9:00 - 11:00 am
Sunday, November 19th - 12:30 - 2:30 pm
Monday, November 20th - 8:00 - 10:00 am

6. DONATE $10 PER SHOE BOX: A donation of $10 per box is critical to cover shipping and other project costs. For easiest processing you can give online, or give by check using a postage-paid envelope. You can also track your shoes box if you choose to donate online.
