RUBY VALLEY ENTERTAINMENT

When springtime rolls around, I am always reminded of live theater. As a student at Sheridan High School, we performed in plays each spring. Live productions have always been of source of entertainment for the Ruby Valley community.

There were amateur drama clubs in most towns. The most prevalent companies in the early days were the Twin Bridges, Sheridan, and Pony Drama Clubs. James Gordon Walker of Virginia City started a troupe there in 1901. These organizations traveled throughout the region, performing in various towns as well as their own. National renowned travelling drama groups also graced the local stages. Plays were often performed for fundraisers of various buildings and other causes.

In the late 1890s a Theater was built on Main Street in Sheridan. Marguerite Ann Miller Black recalled from her childhood, "The new hall was built on Main Street. Local talent staged real, live drama such as 'The Face on the Barroom Floor'. There we also had our first silent movies with solos between the changing of the reels."

Twin Bridges performances were held in White's and Paige's halls until 1914, when Estlin's Opera House was built. Al Ellis constructed a rock-faced steel, nearly fireproof building with all the fixings and furnishings of the most complete theater in the state. It seated 150 people and hosted live and moving theater productions, as well as large balls and dances.

In July of 1948, Charles Bovey booked a college dramatic club for a miner's convention in the "Old Stone Barn", and the famous annual Virginia City Players exposition was born. To this day, it is the oldest continually running summer stock theater company in the Northwest. Now called "The Opera House", the building is an exact replica of a 19th century theater. Shows are performed by professional acting troupes from all over the country. Tickets for the 2021 season go on sale in April, carrying on the legacy of the Valley's admiration of dramatic productions.

The Sheridan dramatic company will give their play "The Fairy of the Tunnel" at White's opera house Thursday, April 17. It will be given as a benefit performance for W. A. Stevenson who has ever been a first class amateur actor and taken part in several plays at Virginia City, but who, for the past year has been under the care of doctors who a few days ago were compelled to amputate his arm.
